G. W. ADAIR,

Real Estate.

I am having a good demand for property now, and look for a lively fall trade. I have a choice list of property, a good conveyance and am always ready to go with customers and take every pains to suit them in homes or investments.

It is unnecessary to publish a long list of property in my hand. I mention only a few:

I have an elegant large residence on Houston street, near Peachtree street.

A splendid corner on Whitehall, near in, at $6,000.

Two or three little cottages near Air Line shops, on Randolph street. A good renting property.

A nice five room house on Rawson street, near Crew street.

Two houses close in, on Church street.

A splendid residence on Luckie street.

A cozy cottage on West street, near Young Men's Christian association building. At a sacrifice.

A nice vacant lot on Simpson street, near railroad.

A vacant lot corner Boulevard and Irwin street.

I have quite a large list of places on the Georgia Pacific railroad, in Edgewood, Kirkwood and Decatur.

I have a large list of property on and near Peachtree street.

I have any kind of property you want, and if you will come I will go out with you and show you around.

I WILL CONDUCT THE

Great Tallapoosa Sale

ON THE PREMISES ON

24th, 25th & 26th Inst.

So much has been said and written about Tallapoosa recently, her marvelous mineral resources, fine cold, clear water, close proximity to mineral springs, glorious climate, commanding altitude, thus assuring health, the very desirable advantages for a home, combined with her gold, iron, marble and other desirable veins, make it so self-evident that to those seeking investments or a home, I can only say

GO AND LOOK FOR YOURSELF.

No pen can do it justice; word painting is inadequate. The enthusiasm is overwhelming. If you see it you will locate or invest.

Terms of Sale.—One-fourth cash, balance in one, two and three years with interest at 8 per cent.

Liberal reductions made on installments to those who will build a house costing $500 on lot within twelve months.

Special trains will run from Atlanta every day of sale.

LACE CURTAINS.

A magnificent display in new weaves at the importing house of Chamberlin, Johnson, & Co.

MEDICAL.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles, which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints. Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial, — avoiding all powder, soap, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Cremation Among the Alaska Indians.

THE CURIOUS FUNERAL CEREMONIES.

Thienket Superstition—Preparing for Death—Providing the Spirit With a Square Meal—Feasting.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Among the Indians known as the Thienket, who inhabit the coast and contiguous islands of southeastern Alaska, the practice of cremation is universal, except in the case of shamans, or medicine men, whose spirits after death inhabit a higher world apart from the common herd of slaves who are considered scarcely worthy of this distinction.

At this late day, among a people who have no written characters, and whose history has been handed down by word of mouth, it is impossible to trace the origin of this custom which has, through long ages, become a religious belief, and tradition offers the explanation that many years since one who had returned from the land of spirits, and, collecting his people, gave them his experience: "When death releases the spirit it goes forth to seek the happy hunting land, and slowly gropes its way along a narrow, rough trail, over sharp rocks and through tangled forests (on account of which the respecter of the dead for cremation is well clad, the hands and feet being protected by moosehorns and mittens). After a weary journey it comes to the shore of a broad green sea, across which, at a great distance, are seen people who look scarcely larger than mosquitoes. To these the spirit calls to send a canoe, but, receiving no answer, drops down and, realizing that it is soon lost in sleep. Awakening late and hearing voices calling, it sees a canoe approaching from over the waters which recedes with Indians only. Here are recognized all the old friends and brothers who have gone before and who now come crowding around in welcome and good word. The union of the military spirit with the church is attractive. One of the crack regiments is named after a church, and the regiment worships its chief as regularly and probably more so, than it parades in the field. The Greek church is the mother of all churches. The Greek speech made the Greek the living voice of the world. It is the living voice of the world behind it, it is filled with superstition. The Greek church in Russia differs from the same church at Constantinople, Jerusalem and Alexandria. The Roman church is an absolute monarchy; the Greek, an oligarchy. The Greek church has no supreme pontiff and was never in the hands of a pope. It never conquered the inhabitants of new lands as did the Romans. It has no power of excommunication except in Russia. In the Greek church the chief is the Holy Ghost, as well as in the Roman church. The latter allows unrepentant sinners to be members of the church, but the Greek church does not. In the seven sacraments, as the Romans do, but teaches them differently. It believes in three immersions of the body at baptism, and in anointing the whole body for the cure of the sick; the Roman is satisfied with anointing the head. In the Greek church an infant is baptized and confirmed at the same time. In the cathedral at Moscow the pope saw a golden spoon put into a child's mouth at its first sacrament. The Greek church is kind to the dead, but it does not pray much for the dead. In the Roman church a dead man is fixed. It does not treat the Virgin Mary as power with God, but treats her with the greatest reverence. It puts the oven into the hands of the Virgin Mary. The Bible is published in modern Russian and in Slavonic and all can read it freely. The services are made up largely from the Hymns of Chrysostom and Basil. The Hymns and directions fill about twenty volumes. The gospel is read publicly. The preacher attended service in the great Church of the Redeemer, at Moscow, built and lately finished to commemorate the overthrow of Napoleon, and said the scene was a magnificent one. He stood in the choir, and the churches had no seats. There is a story, right hard to believe, that the gospel floated to Russia. It is said a man was thrown overboard in a millstream with a nail driven around his neck, and that, thus weighted, he floated through the Mediterranean to the Baltic, and got to Russia. The true story is, the gospel came to Russia by the hands of the Vikings, a Norseman, in the year of 926. His conversion was hastened by his marriage. He had all his people converted by baptizing them without delay. As soon as this was done he had the Bible put into his own tongue. Russia was the first nation, after conversion, to do this. The gospel got its final form from Peter the Great, who seems to have stamped his individuality upon everything in Russia. Peter traveled, and all the nations visited tried to convert him. He was a Presbyterian, but failed. Peter tried his hand on the Gospel and made some changes. The Greek church is a strongly rooted superstition among these people that should the body pass through the doorway that later the death spirit would return to claim more victims. As the body is carried out an old woman takes some coals and burning fragments from the fire and scattered them after it to drive away the spirit of death and cleanse the passageway, and afterward throws a handful of money to the master's spirit to the world beyond.

The Thienket believes that shortly before death the spirit of some loved friend gone before will appear to him, saying: "My dear brother, or good friend, you can last but a few suns longer, and it is best so, for life is but hard; so be ready, or I will come soon to lead your spirit to a land where all is happiness." With this assurance the Indian meets death without a murmur, and it is not to be wondered at when we remember that his whole life is but a struggle with nature for existence.

With the last breath tidings go out to the clan, who assemble with blackened faces to mourn the dead, and in former years the nearer relatives cut off the hair. The corpse is now dressed in the most valued garments, the face decorated in red and black and placed in a sitting position with back to the wall, opposite the entrance. All the property of the deceased is now brought and piled on either hand—the Thienket counts his wealth in blankets, kept stored away in cupboards or on chests. Masks, zoots, rags, ropes, guns, hunting and fishing implements and dancing paraphernalia are placed directly around. The head is surmounted by a profusely carved wooden mask in grotesque design, brilliant in its inlay of hollock shell and topped by a semi-transparent forest of sea lion whiskers, while over the body there is a high ornamental blanket, woven from the finer fleece of the mountain goat and worked in black, white, yellow and blue from old pattern boards that have been handed down through generations until the designs have become conventional.

THE CHAMBER OF DEATH.
For three days the dead remains a silent spectator of household affairs, which, as go on much as usual, as a number of families live under the same roof. Visitors come and go, food is prepared at the common central fire, and children toddle about, and the usual monotony of the scene is broken by the sound of the great cracking fire of cedar logs, over which at intervals oil is dashed to redouble the effect.

For three nights this scene is repeated, but on the third day the wealth of the deceased is distributed among the relatives, each one receiving a certain portion, as judged by popular consent.

The funeral pyre is now erected directly in rear of the house, or on the outskirts of the village, in proximity to the Log Cabin, a fragrant yellow cedar are now brought and laid upon each other, forming a hollow parallelogram seven feet long by three feet wide. At a height of from two to three feet a flooring of logs is laid, leaving air spaces between them, above which the walls are continued for another foot. Beneath the flooring and around the sides kindling and spruce knots saturated with gum are placed.

All being in readiness, on the fourth day the clan assemble, a plan is now made from the side or end of the house, and through this opening the dead is carried on a mat made from the inner bark of the red cedar, for it is a strongly rooted superstition among these people that should the body pass through the doorway that later the death spirit would return to claim more victims. As the body is carried out an old woman takes some coals and burning fragments from the fire and scattered them after it to drive away the spirit of death and cleanse the passageway, and afterward throws a handful of money to the master's spirit to the world beyond.

The procession now makes its way slowly toward the place selected for cremation, and when reached the body is suspended over the raised flooring of the pyre and a torch applied to the resinous splinters, readily igniting the whole mass. The flames, rising and reaching the roof, are decorated with a blue-black blanket, laced with red cloth, and ornamented with hundreds of mother-of-pearl buttons, fancy colored caps or laces of ravens' eagles, feathers, immense ear-rings and nose pendants, faces blackened, and carrying in the right hand a long pole, the end of which is decorated with a blue-black blanket, laced with red cloth, and land survey for new roads has been recently made nearby through the center, the main roadways split
the property for more than a mile, and making the most available for subdivision, and making the residence property in the vicinity of that beautiful and growing city. The old Holland gold mine, now owned by Burke & Co., lays broadside and beautiful indications are abundant of gold, silver, and iron. Go and look at the land and you will be satisfied and sold at once.

4 acres, finest body around Atlanta, can be subdivided and made a grand place, with a fine view of the city, and a beautiful view of the city.
If you want a big thing call on us.

8 acres on Capital avenue, just outside limits
of city.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

A Review of the Literary Field.

BRIEF NOTES ABOUT NEW BOOKS.

Reminiscences of Winfield Scott Hancock.
The General of the Civil War—
Fences, Gates and Bridges.

JACK HALL, by Robert Grant, Jordan,
Marsh & Co., Boston. A story of an American boy's school days.

THE BROWNIES, THEIR BOOK, by Palmer
Cox, the Century Company, New York. A capital juvenile book.

MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME, by Stephen C.
Foster, illustrated, Ticknor & Co., Boston. A beautiful holiday book.

A PURITAN LOVER, by Laura Fessenden, Rand, McNally & Co., Chicago. A love story not particularly striking in style or plot.

JULIAN MORTIMER, by Harry Castlemon, published by A. L. Burt, New York, is a blood and thunder story of a boy's adventures on the frontier.

BATTLES AND LEADERS OF THE CIVIL WAR,
the Century Co., New York. This is number six of the series. It is fully as interesting and attractive as the preceding numbers.

THE HUNTERMAN, by J. R. Stockton, the Century Co., New York. This is one of the longest of Mr. Stockton's stories, but while it is very popular, it is not one of the best.

LOWER MEMPHIS LILIES, by Margaret B.
Harvey, published by the J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia, is a handsome volume containing a number of poems of more than ordinary merit.

A POPULAR CHEMISTRY, by J. Dorman
Steele, published by A. S. Barnes & Co., New York, is a treatise that will be favorably received. It is adapted to the comprehension of young readers.

"FENCES, GATES AND BRIDGES," edited by George A. Martin, with 300 illustrations, published by the O. J. O'Connell Company, New York, is a practical manual containing many useful hints and instructions.

VOICE CULTURE AND ELOCUTION, by Wm.
T. Ross, published by the Baker & Taylor Co.,
New York, is one of the best works of its kind.
It contains many good recitations in addition to the chapters on elocution.

SOUTHERN SKETCHES, by Jeannette H.
Walworth, Henry Holt & Co., New York. This collection of southern sketches ran through the New York Evening Post and pleased a large circle of readers.

THE GENESIS OF THE CIVIL WAR, by General
S. W. Crawford, published by Charles L.
Webster & Co., New York, is a book of rare
interest. The first chapters of our late war were never more graphically written.

WINGED FLOWER LOVERS, and NEARER MY GOD TO THEE, by Fidelia Bridges and Stokes
Barstow Skelting, published by Fred A. Stokes, New York, Wilson & Bruckner, Atlanta, are two superb little booklets. They are works of art.

REMINISCENCES OF WINFIELD SCOTT HAN-COCK, by his wife, published by Charles L.
Webster & Co., New York, is a book of rare interest. The admirers of this great military chief will be delighted with this attractive and entertaining volume.

DARKING AND SUFFERING, by William Pittinger, the War Publishing Company, New York, is the full and complete story of the famous Andrews railroad raid in Georgia during the war. It is the most thrillingly interesting war book ever written. Mr. Pittinger was one of the raiders and he has made his task a labor of love. The numerous illustrations add greatly to the interest of the book.

THE PRESIDENTIAL GRANT, by G. B. Strickler, D.D., and E. H. Barnett, D.D., published by the Constitution Publishing Company, Atlanta, is an excellent number of an able review. The leading articles are:

"Spurious Religious Excitements," by R. L.
Dabney, D.D., Denominational Colleges, by W. M. Grier, D.D., The Restoration of the Jews, by A. W. Miller, D.D., Nineteenth Century Evangelism, by T. D. Witherspoon, D.
D., and Organic Union, by C. R. Vaughan,
D.D.

News and Notes.

T. H. S. Scott, the English author, is at work on a satirical novel, "How I Became Prime Minister." Edwin Arnold's latest poem, "Atlantis," appears in the October Wide Awake.

J. A. Froude has written a book on India as a companion to his "Oceana," which is said to have netted him $50,000.

Mrs. Kate Tannet Wells has sent to press her first novel, "Miss Curtis."

An illustrated edition of Mr. Stephenson's "Kidnapped" is announced by the Scribners.

The memoirs of the late E. C. Grenville Murray will appear in two volumes. His widow is preparing the work.

Carlyle's "Hero Worship" has been translated into French, the translator's purpose being, he declares, to serve the cause of religious free thought.

Mr. J. T. Trowbridge has published a book, "The house of Lee & Shepherd," a new book for boys entitled "Peter Badstone, the Boy who was Hazed."

Mr. Bunner's story, "The Zedee Pine Labor Union," which is to appear in the Christmas "Scribner," will be illustrated by Mr. J. G. Taylor, of "Puck."

Mr. Taylor has also illustrated for the Editor's Drawer the Christmas "Harper," a vaudeville entitled "Shot Thro' the Head," by the Rev. Edward Everett Hale.

The committee in charge of the Museum Library,
of Canterbury, England, have excluded from their shelves all books of which Miss Bradton is known to be the author. The novel readers of the city are objecting.

The Christmas number of the Book Buyer will contain contributions from Mr. Laurence Hutton and Mrs. Burton Harrison. The November number of the same magazine will contain a portrait and sketch of Augustine Bissell, the author of "Older Diets."

"The Scarlet Shawl," which was published in England some time ago, is now said to have been written by Richard Jefferies, and to have been his first published story.

A volume, containing the best verses in the four English collections of George MacDonald's poetry, is in the press of E. P. Dutton & Co. This book will also contain the first collection of the poems scattered through the poet's novels.

The concluding volume of Dr. Stinde's "Buchholz Family" will soon be accessible in an English translation. It is entitled "Frau Wilhelme." The Scribners will publish it here.

A "Selection from the Poetry of Leigh Hunt" with a preface sketch and a reproduction of an unpublished portrait by Wilkie is in the press of Benjamin & Bell.

The October number of the delightful little magazine "Wide Awake" has a poem entitled "Atlantis"
by Edwin Arnold.

Mr. George Parsons Lathrop says in "The Epoch" that he remembers Bayard Taylor saying that when he was stranded in London, owing to the failure of his banker, Thackeray put him in his bank book and said: "I am $300 ahead. If that is any use to you, take it."

The tale of Mr. Thomas Adolphus Trollope's book is "What I Remember." It contains sketches of Miss Mitford, Landor, D. G. Lewis, Mrs. Barrett Browning, George Eliot, Garibaldi, Prince
Metemher, Mrs. Moli, Mme. Recamier, Chateaubriand,
Mrs. Trollope, and others.

Mr. Kingsley's forthcoming volume on the Cincinnati will take up the story just after the death of Inkerman, and will come down to the substitution of Marshal Canrobert by Marshal Plessier in the command of the French army. The succeeding volume will cover the remaining period down to the death of Lord Raglan.

Scott's "Bridal of Tintern" with fourteen full-page illustrations by Percy Macnoldy, is to be brought out for the holidays by Lee & Shepherd.

The drawings will be reproduced in photogravure.
The Youth's Companion has added Mr. Gladstone to its list of contributors, and the great English statesman has written an article for that popular periodic "The Future of the English Speaking Race," of which he takes a most cheerful

While the article is said to be full of suggestive thoughts, it is written in a simple style which will interest young readers as well as older ones, and indeed, it was expressly written for youthful Americans.

The November number of the Century will contain a particularly interesting instalment of the life of Lincoln, giving for the first time four letters to prominent men. Dr. Eggleston's novel, "The Grayson," will begin in the same number, as will Mr.
Cable's three-part story, "An Lunge." The number will contain also a story story by William Henry Bishop, "A Little Dinner."

The J. B. Lippincott company will issue this month
a volume by Dr. R. A. Watson, entitled, "The Sportsman's Paradise, or the Lake Land of Canada." The volume is to be profusely illustrated by D. C. and Harry Brad.

The popular Holiday books are to be brought out in a new edition in four volumes—thick, and full of good stories and pictures for young people. Mr.
Scribner, to whom the public is indebted for the book of books, has prepared a "Book of Folk Stories" containing 100 stories in 100 chapters, and Lucky, and a dozen other favorites. He has rewritten these so as to make them easily understood by children who have just learned to read.

Thomas Whitaker publishes this week two anthologies of the season. One is for authors, English and American, edited with a critical introduction on the sonnet by William Sharp, the title being "Sonnets of this Century," while the other is called "Sonnets of Europe, being a volume of translations, selected and arranged with notes by Samuel Waddington. Mr. Whitaker also publishes Canon Farrar's new volume of sermons on Everyday Christian Life.

By special arrangement with Robert Louis Stevenson and his former publisher, Messrs. Roberts Bro., Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons have acquired the rights for this country to three of Mr. S. S. Stevenson's works, on their list, and they are responsible for the issue in connection with the author's other works published by them. The three books just purchased are the "New Arabian Nights,"
"The Dynasties: Some More Arabian Nights," (written by the novelists in connection with Mrs.
Stevenson), and "Familiar Studies of Men and Books," a volume of essays. An illustrated edition of Mr. Stevenson's "Kidnapped" will also be brought out by the same publisher.

The pictorial features of the Christmas number of Scribner's Magazine will surpass anything, it is believed, that has ever been published in a periodical of so low a price—25 cents. Among the artists who have been engaged for the issue are the English
painter; W. H. Low, Swain Gifford, J. Hopkinson
Smith, E. R. H. Blashfield, Howard Pyle, J. W. Alexander, F. S. Church, W. L. Taylor, M. J. Burns, and others. The illustrations will be of the best quality, and the work will be a most attractive feature of the issue.

A most important work to be published by Mr.
J. W. Bouton of New York. This is a revised edition of Dr. Bouton's "The Magisterial Services," or history of the English Magistrate from Bede to Keble.
The work will be published in three volumes, with portraits and engravings, in two styles, at the moderate price of $15 and $20 respectively. Another important volume from the same publisher is Robert W. Lowe's "Bibliography of Theatrical Literature."

The new illustrated edition of Dr. Donnan's book on the stage, "The Majesty's Services," has been edited and revised by Dr. W. Lowe from the author's annotated copy. It is illustrated for the first time with fifty newly engraved copperplate portraits of the leading and best known actors and actresses, all of which are printed in India proof. There are also fifty illustrations, newly engraved on wood, printed on each chapter, and mounted at the end of the chapters. There are numerous new and original foot notes given, as well as a copious and exhaustive index to each volume. The new edition is a limited number, and will be printed on royal 8vo. fine deckle-edged paper, with a duplicate set of the fifty portraits, one on Japanese paper and the other on plate paper, as India proof. Each of these copies will be sent to the publisher, and the author's edition of the book will be sent to the American agents of the London publisher.

The conductors of the American Magazine deny the amusing story that has been going on for some time to the effect that the magazine would be run for the benefit of its contributors, who would receive stock in payment for their literary work. In its new volume, beginning with the November number, the magazine has been very important, and its monthly departments; they will include book reviews from Julian Hawthorne, a "Calendar of Health," by Dr. Hutchinson, and "Household Art," with illustrations by J. M. J. Jones.

Professor Joseph Leconte will undertake to show
in an article on "Agassiz and Evolution," in the November number of the popular Science Monthly, that the whole inductive basis upon which was affirmed the modern theory of evolution, is a house of cards, and that the whole structure is laid by Agassiz, although he himself persistently refused to build upon it any really scientific structure.

Along the important books to be issued by Scribner & Wolford this fall are: A new translation of the autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini, the memoirs of John Addington Symonds; the "Memoirs of Louis de Keralio, duchess of Portsmouth," a historical sketch of the life of the duchess, by Dr. Donnan's "System of Christian Ethics," translated by Professor Mead of Andover.

Adam Badeau's memoir of General Grant is announced by Scribner & Wolford. It is a new translation of the memoir of General Grant, and is the title of "Grant in Peace, from Appomattox to Mt. McGregor." The work takes up General Grant's career at the point where it was left off in his own memoirs, and tells of the general's relations with prominent people, beside giving original letters, and previously published, and other interesting documents.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is a purely vegetable preparation, being free from injurious ingredients. It is peculiar in its curative power.

Dr. McDonald's Second Series of Sunday Night Discourses.

Tonight, at the Second Baptist church, corner Washington and Mitchell streets, the Rev. Dr.
McDonald will preach the first of his second series of Sunday night discourses. Preparatory to this series of discourses, which will be delivered on Thursdays, the subject of tonight's discourse will be
"The Bible—How to use it."

The wide-spread interest created by the series of Sunday night discourses recently preached by Dr.
McDonald will, no doubt, be more than sustained
by the coming series.

He will also occupy his pulpit at 11 a. m. today
and these attending may expect to hear theological and some of the ablest and most popular preachers
in the country.

On last Thursday, Dr. McDonald, by invitation, delivered an address at Louisville, Ky., on the occasion of the opening of the Baptist Jubilee. This was an important occasion, and in his address
he responded to the address of welcome by Dr. Broadus, he is reported by the Kentucky papers to have admirably sustained his reputation as a speaker, and his address was well received by the large audience which was present.

The most efficacious stimulants to excite the appetite are ANGER AND BITTERNESS, prepared by Dr. J. G. Siebert & Sons. Beware of counterfeits. Ask your grocer or druggist for the genuine article.

SENSELESS HYMNS.

Pertinent Observations by a Sober Churchman.

AN ARTICLE IN THE "19TH CENTURY."

The Hon. Mrs. Chapman Deals Boldly and With a Very Delicate Subject and Shows up Some of the Doggerel.

From the Chicago Tribune.

In her "Dialog on Hymns," in the September number of the Nineteenth Century, the Hon. Mrs. Chapman has dealt boldly and skillfully with a very delicate subject. She has, however, scarcely touched upon what she has always seemed to me to be the two greatest blots upon our favorite hymns. One of these is the unsuitableness of most of the hymns which are commonly considered to be especially adapted for children's use. It is hard to believe that those who would put into the mouths of babes and sucklings such sentiments as:

With the prophet's goodly line
We in mystic bond combine,
The very God, yet born on earth
Of Mary undefiled.

can ever have been children themselves; but even this unintelligible mysticism is less objectionable than the doggerel of the rubricated hymns "written down to the young intellects," for example:

He went about, He was so kind,
To cure poor people who were blind;
And made the lame to walk and the deaf to hear,<
He lifted them and did the same.

A sort of gospel done into doggerel which is itself a reminder of the "Straw-walkers." Of the hymns which are neither above nor beneath the infant understanding many are objectionable in the extreme. They are, for the most part, not only unpoetical, but wholly insufficient reward, such as a golden crown, a harp, or a palm branch. There are a few very low examples of what children's hymns should be. Two such are, "Jesus, tender Shepherd, hear me," and "I think when I read that sweet story of old, Neither of them, by the way, is to be found in "Hymns Ancient and Modern."

The second, and by far the most serious of the two matters to which I have referred as having been left untouched by Mrs. Chapman, is one with which it is difficult, perhaps, impossible, to deal without wounding the sensibilities of many devout persons. Yet it can hardly be failed to attract the attention of almost every manly Christian. It is, in short, the ever-recurring expression of sensual regard for the incarnate savior. Sensuality is an unpleasant term, but I know not how else to characterize the sentiment which diverts attention from the spiritual attributes of the Right of men to glorify in his "darling body," to gaze "with rapture" on his "glorious scars," and to exclaim:

And count each sacred wound
In hands and feet and side;
This is the spirit in which the mother of the Lord gazed on the infant Jesus.

Is this the spirit in which the mother of the Lord gazed on the infant Jesus? Is it religious or is it profane? Is it spiritual or is it carnal? It seems to me that it is not only not religious, but anti-religious; not only not healthy, but morally degraded and degrading. Here are a few samples of the sentiment which is to be found on almost every page of our hymn-books, new and old, Anglican and evangelical:

Look on His head, that bleeding head,
With crown of thorns and crown of pain,
Look on His hands and feet, which bleed,
Which bleed for us, and bleed for sin.

And so on ad nauseam. In one hymn the sentiment is enjoined to observe:

How fast his hands and feet are nailed;
In another to:

Look to Him, till the sight endears
The Savior to thy heart;
He pierced his side with tears,
Not from his cross depart.

Apart from the question as to the Christianity or heathenism of a religion which worships the incarnate and dead Jesus in preference to the living spiritual Christ, I would ask whether the rapturous adoration of an imaginary crucified One is not a hundred times more likely to disturb the mental and moral equilibrium of the child than the contemplation of a graven image. Shocking as is the sentiment which marks these lines as they are quoted, the inevitable corollary as expressed in the hymn is even worse. Most frequently this takes the form of such blithely irreverent aspirations as:

Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on His gentle bosom,
In other cases a grossly profane idea is conveyed more insidiously. Here, for instance, is a verse from a hymn which is in the Book of Common Prayer, and is obviously based upon a book which no Jew was permitted to read until he arrived at maturity, and which is "appointed to be read in churches."

The words, I should mention, are put into the mouth, not of the church, but of the individual penitent:

I slumber; but my heart is moved
With joy and holy fear;
"Tis Thy love that quickens me,
Thy hand, Thy voice, I hear."
This may be poetry, but it is certainly not the poetry of the gospel. It is the poetry of the lower classes of the lower classes are likely to understand that the voluminous oriental metaphor is used in a conventional sense? But the depth of blasphemy which is involved in this is reached in "Hymns Ancient and Modern," No. 435, from which I extract one verse:

Amongst the ill I thought I found,
And thought I found I found,
Adorning all thy close I find,
With glorious gifts thy love provides.

Those who wonder why it is so hard to attract men to public worship will find one reason, I think, in the inefficiency, the foolishness, and the irreverence of many of the hymns in common use.

The Opal Ring.

From the Providence Telegram.

"But, Jack, I always thought opals were unlucky," said Phyllis Redfern to her husband as she looked down at the ring he had just placed on her finger, and then at his smiling face.

"I hope you are not superstitious, dear—why that ring has been in our family for twenty years, and I think we have been pretty lucky notwithstanding. I am sure I am in luck to get such a wife," and he kissed her tenderly.

Jack Redfern followed the w. and was very proud of his beautiful wife, though at times inclined to be jealous. He did not want her to be even on friendly terms with any other man, and grew out of temper sometimes when she only smiled at a young man.

In spite of all this, Phyllis was very fond of him, and was a great regret to her that he was compelled to be away on voyages so often.

Early in the spring there was some talk of his vessel going abroad. Jack was very anxious to go, and as he could not make some arrangement to stop over a voyage at home. Phyllis spent the time during the absence overlooking the little cottage and getting things in order.

One afternoon she went out in her garden to weed her flower beds. The tulips and hyacinths were in full bloom, and the air was filled with fragrance, but she was thinking too much of her absent husband to take pleasure in anything, as she worked with a will.

"Phyllis!" cried a pleasant, but lazy voice. She dropped her pen and looked up.

It was only Bob, her cousin, Robert Ruckhart. "Why, Robert, how you startled me!" she said. "Will you come in? You are very busy."

The young man smiled in.

"You're always busy, it seems to me, Phyllis, when I'm about," he said with a smiling sort of impudence. "Won't you shake hands with a fellow for the sake of old times?"

A flash, almost as quick as the tulip streaks, rose in the young wife's cheeks, but she gave Bob the tips of her fingers.

In her girlish days Phyllis had been a good deal admired, for her eyes and hair and winning ways for the most part, but in her married life she would one day inherit the old Dukehart home-stead served to enhance her attractions.

SOME SPUNKY NOBLES.

Grand Duke Nicholas at a Cook-Fight.

HOW TO PRONOUNCE ARKANSAS.

Rows in the Aristocracy—The Honey-comb cell Myth Disparaged—English Noblemen of the Old Days.

From Chambers Journal.

When the Grand Duke Nicholas was in England he was taken the round of sporting London, not incoincidentally, under the protection of Inspector X., as a grand duke, with a curiosity to see "the fancy," might be even in the present day, but with all state and circumstance. He went to the Royal cockpit to see a cock fight, and for his escort he took a dog for a silver collar, and a bull-baiting, from the latter he had to take flight rather precipitately in consequence of the tortured animal breaking loose.

The English gentlemen of those days was always ready to throw off his coat and appeal to fists with any one, from his own equal to the lowest street urchin. If a cockerowner jostled him in the street a ring would be formed in a moment and dandy and rough would never leave one another until the one had cried a go.

Noblemen have jumped out of their carriages on the high road to thrash an insolent waggoner who refused to make way for them.

Phyllis, said he, angrily, "where is your wedding ring?"

She looked down at her finger with a start, her heart falling at his tone.

"Why, Jack, I have got my wedding ring on my finger, I hope I have not lost it."

Her husband threw her from him with a muttered exclamation, and strode out of the house without a word.

It was many weeks before Phyllis was able to be again, Rob, appealed at the trouble he had caused, returned the ring and told her it came into his possession—too late to do any good. Jack was gone.

"I'll find him and bring him back to her if it costs me my life," said Rob in earnest, and with a last look at her death-like face he departed.

How long the summer was to Phyllis, waiting for one who never came. A mother now as well as wife, her heart grew sad that perhaps he should never see the baby. One day she stood at the gate, a quick, resolute tread resounded in the road below.

Phyllis looked up, with her heart in a wild flutter. It was not the postman, but a tall, bronzed man.

"Oh, Jack, oh, Jack!"

Her cry of rapture startled the birds into silence and hushed the chirping crickets.

In twinkling Jack had upon his strong arms, and his tears fell on her cheeks.

"Oh, Phyllis, can you forgive me?" he said, with choking voice.

"There is nothing to forgive," she sobbed, clinging to him. "So, Jack, I have got my wedding ring on my finger, I hope I have not lost it."

Jack, how did you know? she asked at last, when the first rapture of the reunion was over.

"Did you get my letter?"

"No," he answered hoarsely. "It was Rob. He followed me across the ocean, found me and told me everything. Phyllis, can you forgive me?"

"What?" she said softly, "you are my baby's father. What good is your letter, together no man can put asunder. Let us go home."

The Stray Bullet.

From the Hawkinsville, Ga., News.

Mrs. Kemp, whose husband is farming for R. J. Anderson, of Macon, on his plantation near here, was in his yard attending to some domestic affairs on Saturday afternoon and heard the report of a pistol and instantly started.

The whizz of a bullet passing near her. Facing the direction of the report she heard another shot and felt something falling on her head.

It was a bullet from a pistol which had penetrated the clothing but did not enter the flesh. A negro boy about seventeen years old, who was a hand on the place, soon came up and told Mrs. Kemp that he shot at a hawk.

Mrs. Kemp accepted his explanation as he had been a good hand, but the boy took fright and slipped out about half past five. The other hands scared him off. Mrs. Kemp is not hurt.

Dear Sir—Although opposed on general principles, to the use of remedies whose formula are unknown to me, I unhesitatingly recommend a specific for all kinds of croup, your Cheney's Expectorant. Having used it in my own family for the last five years, I do not recall a single instance where it was necessary to give a second dose in order to arrest this dangerous night enemy to the little ones. We will not put out our lights at night without knowing that on the mantle of the nursery is a box of Cheney's Expectorant. Respectfully, A. G. Candler, of Howard & Candler, wholesale druggists.

MARRIAGE SUPERSTITIONS.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Any one who gives attention to the matter must have noticed that there is quite a difference in the number of marriage licenses issued each day from the recorder's office, and a little more careful observation would show that the difference is constant, to use the language of the mathematicians; that is, there are certain days of the week on which the number is exceptionally large, and others on which it is decidedly small. As would naturally be supposed, this difference also extends to the days on which the marriage ceremony is performed.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

Stocks as Reported at the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, October 22.—The stock market today was dull and tame almost from the opening to the close. Transactions were confined chiefly to traders. The opening was heavy at declines ranging from  $\frac{1}{4}$  to  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent, to which was shortly added further small losses, which, however, were soon regained. Extensive dullness then overpowered the list until in the last hour, when the pressure was brought upon Northern Pacific and Oregons. There was a reaction of small fractions from the lowest figures in the last few minutes, and the close was quiet and steady to and from near the lowest prices of the day. Everything, without exception, is lower tonight. Oregon Navigation being down  $\frac{3}{4}$ ,

NEW YORK, October 22—C. I. Green & Co., in report on cotton futures today, say: Considering liberal movement of preceding sessions, the condition of the cotton was very dull, even for Saturday, and no really new future was developed. In absence of new buying orders, and a desire to profit by small longs, made offerings a little excessive, and about 3644 points were lost, at which time news was dull, but the bull element went to bed behind the position, and was prepared to come and neutralize any direct pressure.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(Special).—From Hub-bly, York, & Co., through John S. Ernest: Our cotton day has shown that those who thought of cotton at present prices have been well supplied. The market is not so much affected by the present advance, prices show a disposition to fall. It is not so marked here as in the offers of spot cotton from the south, where the holders are evidently well satisfied with the values now ruling, and are not so anxious to get rid of their cotton at themselves of the present market. It would seem to be the natural result were it not for the strength of October here. Ralls Bros. state their intention to receive the cotton as tendered, and it is evidently expected that they will hold a short interest in the market, which will be a most effective element in the market. The market is expected to close as a hedge at a loss of one dollar per bale on all the purchases of cotton now made by

THE STATE IN BRIEF.

Happenings of the Past Week Reported.

JUDGE HARRIS RECOVERING HEALTH

The West Point Factory about Completed—Ginhouse Burning—A Painful Accident—General News.

Brunswick's new Baptist church will cost $22,000.

Colonel H. H. Perry is suggested for the mayoralty of Gainesville.

Tatnell superior court adjourned last Wednesday night after a three days session.

The rice planters have had an admirable time for harvesting their rice, and all that was made is safe.

Some of the best being made to erect a fine hotel in Elberton. Several thousand dollars have been promised, provided a sufficient sum can be raised.

The Dahlonega Signal says the illumination on Kennesaw mountain, although the distance was over seventy miles, was plainly seen in that town.

Mr. William Lang, of Burnt Fort, Charlton county, says that after a residence of forty years at Burnt Fort, that Mr. James McKee-man brings to his boom the largest and best rats of timber.

A negro named Henry Mack was shot and fatally wounded near Newborn in Newton county, one night last week by Willis Jones, also colored. Mack was in Jones's potato patch stealing potatoes, when Jones shot him.

On Thursday morning last the ginhouse of Colonel Thomas Warthen, at Warthen, caught fire from the friction of the press and burned to the ground. The house contained an engine, press, eighteen bales of cotton, etc. The loss is estimated at $4,000.

A man named George Bangs, from Sandersville, Ga., shot and killed a man named McWilliams, in Jacksonville, Fla., Thursday night. He acted in self defense, as McWilliams had fired at him twice before Bangs shot.

A painful accident occurred to Mr. Tom Pate, of near Barnett, this week. While in the act of loading one barrel of his gun the other, which was loaded, went off, badly maiming his right hand, tearing off two or three fingers. He may lose his whole hand.

The Newnan Herald reports Judge Buchanan as having said that Judge Harris was much better and would probably be able to hold all his courts this fall. Troup court meets on the first Monday in November. Return day is out on the 15th instant.

Mr. Charles F. Abbott, the postmaster at Pelham, who, it will be remembered, was elected to the United States court at Macon on Monday last, was in the city on Monday and came out all right. He passed through Albany on his way home.

Near Marshallville, Mr. Jerome Massey's gin house and outbuildings were burned on Wednesday night about 11 o'clock. He lost five bales of cotton, George D. Tiner two bales, and two negroes one bale each. Mr. Massey lost also the seed from fifty-two bales cotton, a new engine and his gin house. It is supposed the house was set on fire, as there had been no fire about the house in two days.

The factory building of the West Point mills, four miles below town, is about completed. It has a capacity of 12,000 spindles, 120 cards, 300 looms, and will cost $100,000 per day, working a

The Rosedale Manufacturing company are adding new machinery. Will put in 5,000 spindles and 84 looms. The Alabama and Georgia mills are doing a fine business.

LaGrange Reporter: We are pleased to learn that Colonel W. B. Jones will be retained in the agricultural department, as inspector of fertilizers for the LaGrange district. His former position was on the Rome district.

The protest of his friends had the desired effect. The state should give the preference in appointments to her old soldiers. Those who serve us well in war are most efficient in peace.

Last Thursday Mr. John C. Glendinning's gin house, in Lincoln, caught fire from a spark from the engine, and before he could arrest it, the devouring element had completely destroyed the house and all its contents—about seven or eight bales of cotton, the gin and several hundred bushels of cotton seed. This is the second ginhouse that Mr. Glendinning has lost in the last year or two. The engine was saved. No insurance.

Alex Kom, a young man formerly of Mitchell county, but now living in Lee, was arrested by Deputy United States Marshal J. W. Kemp, on Saturday, upon a warrant sworn out by J. O. Peterman, of Mitchell county, charging him with counterfeiting. Kemp was carried to Macon by the deputy marshal on Monday, and, waiving examination, gave bond in the sum of $300 for his appearance for trial. He is charged with making counterfeit notes.

Last week a white man, a stranger, walked into T. Hiles & Co's store, in Summerville, made a small purchase, laid down a dollar, received the change and went out. In a minute or two Mr. Martin noticed that the coin was very light, examined it further, and saw that it was counterfeit. It is very well calculated to deceive. The only difference between it and the genuine silver dollar is that it is much lighter, and the raised surfaces are a little blurred, and the milling is not as sharp and well defined as in the genuine.

A fine, fresh and assorted line of Millinery at Miss Mary Ryan's, 45 Whitehall.

Indispensable.

Dear Sir—It gives me pleasure to recommend to the public such a valuable remedy as Cheney's Expectorant. I have used it in my family with unfailing effect for coughs, colds and croup. I would not be without it. Jno. A. Barry.

Now is the time to travel. Railroad tickets a year's price until October 23, at Harry Franke's New York branch out rate ticket office, 24 Wall street, opposite Union depot.
